What is Permaculture? That was my question.

I just completed the “Permaculture Design Certification” class. The Permaculture movement that is happening around the world was new to me. I am enthusiastically going to be a promoter for this common sense approach to the uses of our Natural Resources (water, soils, food production, energy savings, and all other good use of natural resources). I came away with a good feeling that I can give our clients and students more excellent techniques for creating a beautiful and productive property. This includes options for urban, suburban and rural properties too.

To answer the above question “What is Permaculture”: I would describe it as being in balance with Mother Nature. When we leave this earth it is in as good and hopefully better condition than when we became the Stewards of the land.

Our future generations are relying on us.

Please call me if you have any questions or just want to know more about “Permaculture”

P.S. I want to pay special thanks the Sivananda Ashram Farm in Gras Valley for providing us such a beautiful environment for our classes. They fed us and treated us with the utmost hospitality and, respect. We are very fortunate to have their Yoga Farm in our community.
